Red vs blue gamerpic

We look for the same qualities in jeans as we do in a car - we want a model that shows personality, tempts women to get into it, and yet provides something to live comfortably if we suddenly find ourselves homeless. Like buying for a new ride, there's plenty to consider. Here are the latest models and specs That have well-worn things just got more appeal - that's why we love Pamela Anderson, vintage cars, and our jeans from '82. That's also why jeans makers flush, blast, and sand the gate out some real blues, so you don't have to spend years smashing them into yourself. Personal jeans are an easy way to update even a conservative wardrobe. Look for some with whiskers- the fading lines in the thigh area - but feigned ignorance of ever knowing this word. The real Jeans For your body THIN Look for slim-fit, low-rise jeans with straight legs and slender thighs. Avoid baggy jeans, full thighs, and small, tapered bottom openings. Also skip the high waist, especially if you have a long torso. BIG relaxed jeans will be best for comfort and look, and will give you space in the leg and thigh. Avoid jeans that have high-waisted, snug, or too luggage. AVERAGE You're why regular and relaxed-fit jeans are made. Most fits and styles will work for you. SHORT Look for low- to mid rises, straight legs, and regular or slim fit. Avoid baggy and full-fitting jeans and anything that clusters at the bottom. Rear View Back Pockets Women are definitely opising them, and your picker. Show you're a guy paying attention to detail with cool bag details. If you can't slide your wallet in and out of the back pockets with ease, the jeans are too tight; had the sales girl remove them immediately. Your own wheels CUSTOM size for $70 plus tax and shipping. Levi's will send you a pair of jeans hand-sewn solely for your body. The company's expanded Original Spin program now offers more styles, fabrics, and cutting options — including shorts ($50) and khakis. At Levi's stores, you can be measured and then choose the exact color, style and other details of your jeans. You can also change some of your favorite existing Levi's jeans - if you want to add an inch to the waist, for example. Sit around pantlessly (as usual) and in less than 3 weeks your new jeans will show up. Visit www.levi.com for store locations. Color BLUES FOR YOUR Light-colored jeans are stylish again. (Note: Your G-n-R T-shirt still isn't.) However, do not pack away your dark denim for spring and summer. Dark denim with a solid-colored T-shirt works for casual office days and at the bar. The Shop FIXER-UPPERS Make new jeans look old and old jeans look cooler Most kids think no jeans are cool unless they look like they spend 6 months in Kosovo. Instead of spending a Ben on faded and tom cotton for your children's legs, give them an art project. Lauren Ehrenfeld, a stylist for American Eagle Outfitters, ordered FRAME Cut off the bottom directly above the nate. Use sandpaper or a sandblock, sand block, the edges of the denim in 10 circular motions. (Concrete will do the trick, too.) Toss jeans in the wash. Voilà! They're framed. AGING For a sealed look, the stress points sand: the edges of the bags, the seat, the fly area and the midhighs. CUT Regular-fit jeans to transform into boot-cut style, cutting vertically 1 1/2 to 2 inches along each leg's outer side seam. THE WASHING LAUNDRy instructions for desired corpSES WERE alone in cold water, inside out, with a nonchlory detergent. Add 1 cup vinegar to each wash to maintain blue color. WORN Wash often, with a load of denim items - the agitation of the other jeans will help cause wear and abrasions. Use fabric softseut. UNIQUE Wear new jeans several times, or even for a few months, before washing. Natural barn will appear from normal wear. The different colors are caused by scattering of light in the Earth's atmosphere. Here's a simple experiment you can do to see how it works: You just need some simple material for this weather project. WaterMilkTransparent container with flat parallel sidesFlashlight or phone lifts A small rectangular aquarium working well for this experiment. Try a 2-1/2-liter or 5-liter tank. Any other square or rectangular clear glass or plastic container will work. Fill the with about 3/4 full of water. Turn on the flashlight and hold it flat against the side of the container. You probably won't be able to see the beam of the flashlight, although you have you see bright sparkles where the light hits dust, air bubbles or other small particles in the water. It's a lot like how sunlight travels through space. Add about 1/4 cup of milk (for a 2-1/2 liter of container — increase the amount of milk for a larger container). Stir the milk into the container to mix it with water. Now, if you shine the flashlight against the side of the tank, you can see the ray of light in the water. Particles of the milk scatter light. Examine the container on all sides. Notice if you look at the container from the side, the flashlight ray looks slightly blue, while the end of the flashlight appears slightly yellow. Stir more milk into the water. If you increase the number of particles in the water, the light from the flashlight is stronger scattered. The beam appears even bluer, while the path of the beam goes farthest from the flashlight from yellow to orange. If you look at the flashlight from all over the tank, it looks like it's orange or red, rather than white. The beam also appears to spread out if it crosses the container. The blue end, where there are a few particles spreading light, is like the sky on a clear day. The orange end is like the sky near sunrise or sunset. Light travels in a straight line until it encounters particles, which it deflects or scatters. In pure air or water, you can't see a ray of light and it travels along a straight path. When there are particles in the air or water, such as dust, ash, ice or water droplets, light is spread through the edges of the particles. Milk is a colloid, which contains small particles of fat and protein. Mixed with water, the particles spread light as much as dust light in the atmosphere. Light is spread differently depending on its color or wavelength. Blue light is most scattered, while the orange and red light is least spread out. Looking at the day sky is like seeing a flashlight ray from the side - you see the scattered blue light. Watching sunrise or sunset is like looking directly at the beam of the flashlight - you see the light that doesn't spread, which is orange and red. What makes sunrise and sunset different from the daytime air? This is the amount of atmosphere that the sunlight must cross before it reaches your eyes. If you think of the atmosphere as a layer covering the Earth, sunlight at noon passes through the thinnest part of the layer (which has the least number of particles). Sunlight at sunrise and sunset should take a sideways path to the same point, by much more low, meaning there are many more particles that can spread light. While several types of scattering occur in Earth's atmosphere, Rayleigh spreads are primarily responsible for the blue of day sky and reddish color of the emerging and setup of sun. The Tyndall effect also comes into play, but it's not the cause of blue sky color because molecules in the sky are smaller than the wavelengths of visible light. Smith S. (2005). Human color vision and the unsaturated blue color of the day sky. American Journal of Physics. 73 (7): 590–97. Doi:10.1119/1.1858479Young, Andrew T. (1981). Rayleigh spreads.
